Detroit-area associations earn statewide awards

Five Detroit-area associations earned recognition at the Michigan Society of Association Executives' (MSAE) 10th Annual Diamond Awards Wednesday, Sept. 21, in Novi. The award program recognizes excellence and innovation in associations.

Farmington Hills-based National Truck Equipment Association (NTEA) received two top awards at the ceremony. NTEA earned the Diamond awards for print newsletter for its quarterly publication, NTEA, and for meetings & expositions, $1.5 Million or greater.

The Engineering Society of Detroit, based in Southfield, received the Diamond award for membership development.

Troy-based Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants received gold honorable mentions in the innovative collaboration and meetings & expositions categories.

Also from Farmington Hills, the Associated Food & Petroleum Dealers received silver honorable mention in magazine publishing for the AFPD Bottom Line.

Bloomfield Hills-based Construction Association of Michigan (CAM) earned gold honorable mention in magazine publishing for its CAM Magazine, a monthly publication available in both online and print forms that features information on the latest construction techniques, technology and economic and industry impacts on construction in Michigan.

MSAE is a professional organization of more than 600 association executives based in East Lansing that works to advance knowledge in the association industry.
